Two River Computer

In 2006 Fair Haven resident and lifelong computer expert, Tom Bull, saw a need that was not being met in his town and the surrounding area. Home-owners and small businesses were integrating and adding technologies into their lives and there was not a qualified, local resource to help them as things started to get more complicated. Big companies like Circuit City, Best Buy and Staples saw the same need, but some things were missing, including easy accessibility to services, quick response time, practical experience and attention to detail.

That's when Two River Computer (TRC) was formed. The vision behind TRC was to provide reliable, professional, knowledgeable and personalized service tailored to homes and small businesses — a segment of the market that was being ignored by the traditional IT support companies (where Bull spent 15 years) and not being done well by the big guys. With 25 years of experience in the field, Bull knew what it took to build and run a successful business: Provide a service people need, price it fairly and deliver on your promises. TRC began to flourish following this basic philosophy.

Their original business plan was to provide on-site services only, but that changed as people began bringing their broken computers in for repair. Locals who knew about TRC just started showing up to their original location on River Road. Web surfers found TRC as well, and soon the space they had was too small. They relocated to 120 Fair Haven Road in 2013 and built a state-of-the-art shop.

Fast-forward to 2015 and TRC now employs six people dedicated to the vision laid out by Bull back in 2006. They still have two technicians who remain dedicated to on-site work, but more is being done in their shop each day. TRC boasts three Apple-Certified technicians and the expertise to service most Apple products, including iMac, MacBook, iPhones and iPads. They also repair all types of laptop and desktop computers running Windows and other operating systems. Data recovery and liquid spill recovery has been high on their customers' lists of needs and TRC answers with a very high recovery success-rate.

With technology constantly changing, TRC continues to stay connected with older technologies, while keeping their eyes on the future. As more devices rely on wifi and on the Internet to make their home and businesses run, those networks are getting more complex and TRC has the know-how to make those networks strong and secure. TRC now also works with TVs, sound systems, video cameras and much more in order to stay relevant in their field, but to also offer their customers the very best experience when working with a technology integration company.
